Firefighters Rescue Woman After Building Collapse

December 21, 2012

Missouri - Firefighters this afternoon rescued a woman from a collapsed building in the 1300 block of North Garrison Avenue, authorities said. St. Louis Fire Capt. Dan Sutter said a three-story building collapsed onto another three-story building, briefly trapping two people inside. Firefighters went in and pulled a woman out through a second-floor window.

She refused medical treatment, Sutter said.

Sutter said it was unclear what caused the collapses but that high winds could have been a possible factor.

This is a breaking story. Check back to STLtoday.com for updates.
